

NEW YORK POST

April 7, 2011

SoHo search

It's been a bloodbath at AOL, which has been firing scores of freelancers. But the company's new content boss, Arianna Huffington, who recently sold the Huffington Post to AOL for $315 million, is sitting pretty. And she's continuing her search for a high-end downtown rental.

Huffington recently toured a $25,000-a-month, seventh-floor, three-bedroom, three-bathroom apartment at 55 Thompson St. in SoHo.

While she was there, she also looked at a $35,000-a-month three-bedroom, 3½-bathroom, three-story "townhouse" residence. That home includes a patio with a grill on the first floor and a balcony off one of the third-floor bedrooms.

Last week, we reported that Huffington visited a $25,000-a-month rental at 40 Mercer St., also in SoHo.